Dear Friends,

Merry Christmas to you all! Today, we offer grand reverence to the “incarnation” (enfleshment) of the second person of the Trinity. The second person, the Son, the Word of God, became Man and was born in time. During the Creed this weekend, we genuflect at the words “and became flesh and dwelt among us.” Of course, there’s so many different ways that we festivate with family and friends, yet this liturgical gesture is special. Like the Little Drummer Boy, they told us to come and we have no fine gift to bring worthy of the God-Man, but today we come as a family and like the shepherds adore. Come, let us adore him!

Peace,
Father
